GARGOYLE TEAM

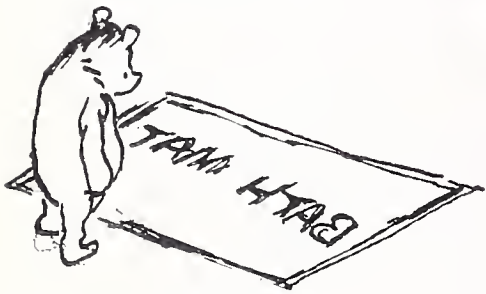

"Don't hustle me," said Eeyore, getting up slowly. "Don't now-then me?" He took a piece of paper from behind his ear, and unfolded it. "Nobody knows anything about this. This is a Suprise." He coughed in an important way, and began again: "What-nots and Etceteras, before I begin, or perhaps I should say, before I end, I have a piece of Poetry to read to you. Hitherto—hitherto—a long word meaning—well, you'll see what it means directly—hither, as I was saying, all the Poetry in the Forest has been written by Pooh, a Bear with a Pleasing Manner but a Positively Startling Lack of Brain. The Poem which I am about to read to you was written by Eeyore, by Myself, in a Quiet Moment. If somebody will take Roo's bull's-eye away from him, and wake up Owl, we shall be able to enjoy it. I call it POEM."

We are going.
 At least we think we are.
 Where?
 Nobody knows.
 But we are going—
 I mean we goes
 (To rhyme with "knows")
 Do we care?
 (To rhyme with "where")
 We do
 Very much.
 (I haven't got a rhyme for the "are"
 in the second line yet. Bother.)
 (Now I haven't got a rhyme for bother. Bother.)
 These two bothers will have to rhyme with each other.
 Buther.
 The fact in this is more difficult than we thought,
 We ought
 (Very good indeed)
 We ought
 To begin again,
 But it is easier
 To stop.
 Abbot, good-bye,
 I
 (Good)
 I
 And all your friends
 Sends—
 I mean all your friend
 Send—
 (Very awkward this, it keeps going wrong)
 Well, anyhow, we send
 Our love.

END

"It's snowing still," said Eeyore gloomily."

"What is learning? — A thing Rabbit knows."

Thank You, Ottmar!

On July 3, 1886, in the composing room of the New York Tribune an historic event took place. Seated at the keyboard of his new machine, Ottmar Mergenthaler handed to Whitelaw Reid a slug of metal. Reid exclaimed, "It's a line-of-type!" Thus was christened the forerunner of today's modern line-casting machine: the Linotype.

Here at Portland Lithograph Company, this machine plays an important part in yearbook production and careful, accurate typesetting is always a leading factor for an outstanding annual.
